The Indie Gathering has been described as the Olympics for the Independent Film Making.

Its mission is to encourage film makers through a competitive showcase of independent features, documentaries, shorts, music videos and trailers. This 3 day National Conference event for Independent Filmmakers include a film festival, seminars, convention, celebrity party and free lectures.

A Book Of Truth, A Book Of Lies (2007, 112 min.) is an unconventional, provocative, high-dense psychological drama that tells the story of an atheist poly-amorous couple in a pre-9/11 NYC who are convinced that the single source of world problems is a human propensity to live by un-provable and misinterpreted causes including god, happiness, unconditional love, family values, human rights, etc. The protagonists' encouragement of their lovers, family members and America itself to adopt a more critical and liberating vision of traditional values is met with ambiguity and growing tension. The collision ultimately takes a shape of the clash of civilizations.

The film has been steadily gaining momentum in the festival circles. In June it has won 4 prestigious Honorable Mentions in the Accolade National Competition in feature film, directing, leading actor and supporting actor categories.
